

CIVIL AVIATION AIRPORT PRIVATISATION AUSTRALIA & INTERNATIONAL

Ambidji is a fully independent, international consulting firm specialising in the planning, development and management of modern infrastructure supporting the air transport industry. Head offices are located in Melbourne, Australia.

Ambidji offer an extensive range of professional consulting services covering air transport sector planning, policy development, institutional reform and business planning. As part of its service offering, the firm undertakes sector economic and financial analysis to facilitate the development of effective air transport systems that balance competing regulatory, economic, safety and operational aspects. To support its management consulting activities, Ambidji is able to offer clients a strong technical capability in airport planning and management, airspace planning, air traffic management; aviation capacity management and the engineering of technology based infrastructure.

The firm has played a key role in assisting a number of national and regional governments with the development and reform of their air transport sectors, to ensure air transport plays its efficient role in developing a modern economy. The firm has a strong international experience record in assisting governments analyse aviation sector performance and to develop or implement policies and plans relating to the establishment, technical modernisation and/or privatisation (or corporatisation) of airports, safety regulatory agencies, as well as air traffic control service providers and facilities. This may also include making recommendations relating to the facilitation of private sector investment in civil aviation infrastructure.

Ambidji has provided its professional services in some 35 countries including Australia and New Zealand, as well as conducting comprehensive policy and infrastructure planning tasks for many developing economies, including Brunei, China, Indonesia, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, the South Pacific island nations and the Philippines. In Malaysia, Ambidji addressed the full privatisation of the Government's air traffic control organisation, through engagement as an adviser to a bidding consortium. Ambidji was short listed by the World Bank, after a worldwide search, for qualified advisers to assist the Government of Venezuela to privatise their air traffic control system (now deferred). On the implementation side, Ambidji has also participated in two consortiums in the privatisation bids for two Australian airports during the Australian Government's Phase 2, airport sales process.

Ambidji's consultants are highly experienced within the civil aviation sector. Many of the firm's principals have previously held senior management positions with national airport and civil aviation authorities located in Australia, Europe and Asia and, in some cases, have provided technical expertise and assistance directly to ICAO air navigation and airport working panels.
